DEFINITION

Hazing is defined as any intentional, knowing, or reckless act, committed individually or in concert with others, against a student, regardless of their willingness to participate, that is connected to joining, maintaining, or affiliating with a student organization and results in, or creates a risk of, physical or psychological harm or social ostracism.

SUBSTANTIATED HAZING INCIDENTS

The following table includes any hazing incidents that were substantiated through formal investigation as outlined in the Community Code of Conduct. An incident is considered substantiated when it meets the criteria outlined in the Mount Marty University Student Handbook and a responsible finding has been issued through the student conduct process. Each case listed involved behavior connected to initiation, membership, or affiliation with a student organization and resulted in physical harm, psychological harm, or a significant risk thereof. Reports that do not result in formal findings due to insufficient information, unsubstantiated allegations, or incidents falling outside the definition of hazing are not included.

No substantiated incidents were reported during this period (July 1, 2025 – July 15, 2026).
